

2015 Greenie League Baseball

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: What is the new age as of date?

A: The new age as of date is December 31st of the current year. For example, the 2015 age as of date will be December 31st, 2015. The 2016 age as of date will be December 31st, 2016.

Q: Why did Little League International make the change?

A: The change will make the program younger. The goal for the change is to make sure a player does not turn 13 during the course of a season in the Little League 9-12 year old division.

Q: My child is born between May 2006 and December 2006. Why does he or she lose a year of Little League eligibility if they play in the Big Fry Division?

A: Greenville Little Leagues will begin using the new age requirement criteria during the 2015 season and therefore your child is considered a 9 year old and eligible for Little League. We are providing kids born in this date range an option so they can choose to try out for Little League or play Greenie League one more season. This option is being provided since these participants would have played in the Big Fry Division prior to the change and did not get an opportunity to play in Greenville Little Leagues Fall Baseball Program. If your child plays Greenie League, they will be giving up their first year of eligibility in Little League and will have 3 years remaining.

Q: If I register my child for Greenville Little Leagues, but he/she does not make a Major League team, can we register for Greenie League by the deadline.

A: No. Once your child is signed up for Greenville Little Leagues, they will not be allowed to play in the Big Fry Division of Greenie League. The decision of what league to play in must be made during the registration period for Little League. Registration for Greenville Little Leagues will begin in early March and the deadline is March 11. If your child tries out and does not get drafted to a Greenville Little Leagues Major League team, they will be placed in Greenville Little Leagues Minor League program.
